The event commenced with an enthusiastic crowd gathering in the college amphitheater, eager to witness the talent and passion of their peers. The felicitation ceremony took place and was given to Swastik Sawhney, president of OSTRACA (creative writing society), with a bouquet of flowers by Palak Chauhan for graciously accepting the role of the judge in this event. Shubham Anand gave a short introduction about the topic and the rules, and the event started with a positive affirmation by Sharique.

Participants Saloni, Bhoomi, and Shilpjayoti presented a beautiful dance encapsulating the challenges faced by girls from birth and norms based on gender stereotypes shaping a girl's identity and role within the family. Their expressive movements and facial expressions conveyed the emotional strain of carrying the burden of societal expectations and familial responsibilities. Their movements oscillated between moments of heaviness, sadness, and frustration, depicting the emotional weight carried by women.

Following that, participants Shubham Kumar, Sandhaya, Srusti, Vishal, and Yogita used poetic expression to emphasise the changes faced by students who live far away from home and how sudden changes impact human life. One participant expressed "Sangarsh" as a weapon and shared examples that changed the course of history, such as Sati Pratha and the Missile Man. The audience responded with clapping and appreciation for these poetic verses.

Another participant, Sanjana Behura, shared her story of facing various obstacles from society and discrimination. However, through her perseverance and innovative approaches, she broke down barriers and inspired others to embrace inclusivity and diversity. She expressed that despite physical limitations, her spirit knew no bounds, and she continued to pursue her passion and advocate for change. Following that, Mohit Sarwan, Garima, and Monalisa sang a beautiful song embodying the spirit of activism, courage, and perseverance, serving as a reminder that change is possible but requires dedication, unity, and unwavering resolve to overcome obstacles.
