The event began with a brief introduction by members of Haritima, highlighting the environmental impact of single-use plastics and the importance of adopting biodegradable options. Representatives from The Environmental Consortium provided insights into the environmental benefits of paper bags, discussing how these alternatives can help curb plastic waste and contribute to a greener environment. The session encouraged students to consider the lifecycle of everyday products and opt for sustainable choices whenever possible.

Under the guidance of volunteers from @the.soft.move, participants engaged in hands-on activities, learning techniques for creating durable and attractive paper bags from recycled materials. Students were provided with recycled paper, old newspapers, and art supplies, fostering creativity and resourcefulness. The hands-on experience not only made the workshop enjoyable but also emphasized how easy it is to incorporate sustainable habits into daily life.

The workshop concluded with a display of the paper bags crafted by participants, followed by a brief Q&A session. Feedback was overwhelmingly positive, with students expressing a newfound appreciation for eco-friendly practices. The collaboration among Haritima, The Environmental Consortium, and @the.soft.move was successful in inspiring attendees to take small but impactful steps toward sustainability.
