We organized a webinar with approximately 100 participants on Google meet & Facebook Live on March 14, on the topic "Sustainable Development" and with your due cooperation, it turned into a big triumph.

Our speaker was MISS. REVA BHARDWAJ began the session with the question of our understanding of sustainable development. Compared to a traditional understanding of the topic she enlightened the attendees regarding the theme of "practice what you preach". She remarked herself not to be an environmental activist rather a researcher with the idea of a holistic programme of sustainable development.

There are several pollutants other than industries around us, out of them she pointed out some as cigarette buds (continue polluting land), use of cosmetics (use of little amount can have high cost), e-mails (delete unnecessary keep necessary), textile industry (1 pair jeans - 10000 lit. water use), meat on a plate (2400 gallon of water for 1 pound meat). Explaining all these aspects she requested to reuse and recycle, circular economy concept, plantation drives, street play, use of bins, marking education and youth as the backbone of this development.

Overall attendees were engaged throughout the session as she also addressed all our curiosities with utmost pleasure.
