organized an insightful workshop on “How to Grow a Perfect Plant” and “Compost Making.” Held in the serene setting of the Botany Garden at Hansraj College, the workshop aimed to educate students on practical, eco-friendly practices to support sustainable living.

The session began at 2:00 pm, attracting an enthusiastic group of participants eager to learn about plant care and organic waste management. Haritima members opened the event by sharing the significance of the International Day of Forests, emphasizing the essential role of forests in combating climate change, conserving biodiversity, and supporting sustainable livelihoods. This set the tone for the hands-on, educational activities that followed.

The first part of the workshop focused on the fundamentals of growing healthy plants, where participants were guided on selecting the right soil, understanding sunlight requirements, and proper watering techniques. Tips on nurturing various plant types were also shared, providing attendees with a solid foundation in plant care.

The second session delved into compost making, an essential practice for sustainable waste management. Participants learned about different composting methods, suitable materials, and the benefits of compost in enriching soil health. Haritima volunteers provided demonstrations,
