Event Description (About 250 Words):

The visit to Safeda Basti was organized with the goal of introducing a new vertical into Project Mehr, focusing on water sanitation and supply. Our aim was to engage with the residents to understand the challenges they face regarding water access. The locals revealed that they rely heavily on the Yamuna River for daily water needs such as bathing and laundry, leading to severe water contamination and pollution.

In response, we proposed establishing water stations in and around the area to help reduce their dependence on the river. Through these discussions, we gained valuable insights into the community's struggles with water supply and quality. However, during the visit, it became evident that several government initiatives were already in place to address these concerns.

As a result, we concluded that additional efforts from Project Mehr might not be necessary to significantly improve the residents' quality of life. While our interactions were insightful, it became clear that existing solutions could effectively meet the community's needs, leading us to reassess the necessity of further involvement in this particular area.
