haven within the city, home to various flora and fauna native to the Aravalli region.

The trip was guided by Dr. Gaurav Bharodiya, an esteemed environmentalist, who shared his expertise on urban ecosystems and biodiversity conservation. A group of around 30 students participated, gaining insights into the ecological significance of Sanjay Van, including its role in air purification and its function as a vital carbon sink for Delhi. Dr. Bharodiya introduced students to native plant species such as neem, babul, and jamun, as well as diverse birdlife, including peafowl, spotted owls, and black kites.

A hands-on tree plantation drive allowed students to directly contribute to the greening of Sanjay Van, while a waste clean-up activity underscored the importance of responsible tourism. Students actively collected litter found within parts of the forested area.

The visit provided a meaningful experience, offering students a deeper understanding of the importance of urban green spaces and inspiring a commitment
