Jis haath ne mujhe chalna seekhaya Aaj ussi haath ko chrd mai kuch meel chala aaya the most sacred and altruistic relationship is between a parent and their offspring. Every time we encounter difficulties in this world, we look for the other. As the child gets older and starts to explore the world, this bond becomes even more significant. However, as the youngster grows, what grows with them are many differences. These variations result from various political, socio-economic, and technological contexts.

These differences have grown so much in the last several years that they are now the root of many of the disputes between the two. A sense of estrangement gradually develops along with these disputes, and eventually, there is very little and only transactional communication between the two, creating a feeling of alienation and isolation underneath the same roof.
