Event Description (About 250 Words)

The Department of History, Hansraj college recently hosted an engaging seminar featuring Dr. Rohma Javed Rashid, Assistant Professor in the Department of History and Culture at Jamia Millia Islamia. Dr. Rashid delivered an insightful lecture titled “Writing Women into the History of Shahjahanabad,” which attracted a diverse audience of students, faculty members, and scholars of history and gender studies.

Dr. Rashid’s lecture explored the often-overlooked role of women in the history of Shahjahanabad, the historic walled city of Delhi, which was built during the reign of Mughal Emperor Shah Jahan. She focused on how women, who have traditionally been marginalized in historical narratives, contributed to the social, cultural, and political fabric of this iconic city. By incorporating archival research, literature, and oral histories, Dr. Rashid presented a nuanced portrayal of women's experiences in Shahjahanabad, highlighting their influence in both public and private spheres.

The seminar concluded with an interactive Q&A session, where participants raised important questions about the challenges of uncovering women’s histories from limited archival sources and the importance of feminist perspectives in historical research. Dr. Rashid encouraged attendees to think critically about the gaps in mainstream historical narratives and to consider how the inclusion of women’s voices can reshape our understanding of the past.
